

Diversity and inclusion are much promoted in schools today. But what does it actually mean to understand those who are different, that is, others? Experiential learning is often promoted as one of the most effective ways to help students appreciate diversity and develop empathy with those who are different. This highly interactive workshop is designed for teachers to explore and question some of the implicit assumptions built into experiential learning and pedagogical attempts to help students understand others so that they can begin to be more thoughtful about their own strategies of inclusive teaching strategies.
